

Reentry Court

The Reentry Court Program was designed to provide intensive community-based treatment for those Post Release or Mandatory Supervision offenders who have been released from incarceration. By providing intensive case management in the context of judicial authority, the Reentry Court program focusses on promoting stabilization and accountability in the offender's life. The goals of the program are to reduce recidivism by providing enhanced supervision and programming while protecting community safety.

Specialized Training & Employment Project To Success (STEPS)

STEPS is a partnership program between the Ventura County Probation Agency (VCPA) and the Human Services Agency (HSA) to provide comprehensive employment services in Ventura County to PRCS and MS offenders under the Public Safety Realignment Act.

Through an individualized case plan, VCPA identifies offenders who are preparing for, or actively seeking, employment. The probation officer refers offenders to an Employment Specialist who provides an array of intensive employment services from needs assessments to job placement. HSA performs employer outreach and links community employment with appropriate offenders. Through this process, there is a focus on EBP including multi-disciplinary collaboration, monetary incentives, supportive services, and data-driven decision making.

VENTURA COUNTY PROBATION AGENCY

Public Safety Realignment Act Assembly Bill 109

Beginning October 1, 2011, AB 109 changed the definition of a felony offense in California, shifted housing for lower-level offenders from state prisons to local jails, transferred the supervision responsibilities for designated parolees from the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) to county probation agencies, and created new sentencing requirements for these offenders called "Mandatory Supervision."

AB 109 mandated the formation of a local Community Corrections Partnership (CCP) and required that this body complete a realignment implementation plan for the County. As part of the plan, funds were made available for local community-based organizations (CBOs) to develop a network of services aimed at assisting local agencies and curbing recidivism among these offenders.

Evidence-Based Programming (EBP)

In 2013, the Ventura County Probation Agency contracted with Interface Children & Family Services (ICFS) to conduct a countywide gap analysis of treatment needs to best serve this population. After a Request for Proposal process, ICFS Core Connection was selected as the Coordinating Agency to build capacity with CBOs and oversee the administration of four evidence-based programming (EBP) approaches.

In 2014, vendors were selected to provide EBP programming for the AB 109 offenders: Alternative Action Programs will implement Moral Reconciliation Therapy; Community Solutions Inc. will provide Community Case Management services; and the Coalition for Family Harmony will conduct EBP parenting classes.

In-Custody Programming

Todd Road Jail provides inmates with Reentry Services to assist with their transition back into the community. While an inmate is in custody, they have access to vocation, education, and treatment resources. Inmates have the opportunity to earn certificates through vocation training programs, and are able to earn their GED. The treatment programs include curriculum established through Moral Reconciliation Therapy and Cognitive Behavioral Interventions.

Probation assists inmates with the completion of Carey Guides, which help offenders look at how their thinking controls their actions. Post Release and 1170(h) PC offenders are assessed by probation to determine their risks and needs in the community. During a Release Plan meeting, each offender can be assigned to a Community Case Manager that will assist with their transition into the community.
